

Press Release: GEMsoft7 – A Flying Start to 2009

Glasgow based software house GEMsoft7 has bucked the gloomy economic trend with a flying start to 2009; signing two new major contracts and increasing its staffing levels. BAA Gatwick and Vale Inco, a large Canadian based nickel producer, have both purchased P2W, GEMsoft7's web based Permit to Work and Contractor Management software. P2W is used by organisations world wide to help them meet their Health and Safety responsibilities.

"We are absolutely delighted with both contracts." said Phil McKell, Managing Director at GEMsoft7. "BAA Gatwick adds another Airport Operator to our client list in this sector, while Vale Inco represents our first major deal on the American continent. It's a great start to 2009."

GEMsoft7 has recruited two additional staff to support the increased growth. Manoj Bedi is a Product Support Engineer who will be working with the GEMsoft7 support team and development teams. "I'm really looking forward to the variety that working in a SME inevitably brings and the opportunity to work more directly with clients," he said. John Chalmers joins as Operations Manager, responsible for client deployments. "It's great to get stuck in to a major new contract as soon as you arrive. BAA Gatwick is really interesting, but I'm grateful that the rest of the team have already done the implementations with GEMsoft7s' other airport clients, so it's not quite so new for everyone else!" he laughed.

"We've quite a few additional contracts in the pipeline," added Phil McKell, "so I think they're both going to be very busy for quite some time!!"
